MEETING OVERVIEW

Sexual violence is one of the most pressing public health and criminal justice issues in the world, and the rates of sexual violence remain unacceptably high despite national attention. There is a need for urgent and effective action to prevent such crimes from occurring. In recent years, community level public health efforts have had an enormous impact on pressing health issues in our communities. As the field of Sexual Violence Prevention (SVP) increasingly incorporates these strategies into their work, it is crucial to reflect on lessons learned, knowledge, skills and actions needed to engage in community level sexual violence prevention.

This two-day provider meeting will offer an opportunity for SVP professionals to deepen their understanding of community level work being done across the country, with a special focus on examples from the nightlife and school communities. The participants will take the lessons learned from across the country to inform the continuing development and execution a community level SVP plan. Participants will engage in a number of activities that will help them expand their knowledge of the components of a community level approach to SVP, and apply critical thinking to how Regions can further use these strategies to maximize the impact of their work.

The meeting builds off the first provider meeting and two one day trainings, and is aimed at a range of experience level and knowledge related to community level prevention of sexual violence. The program will include presentations, group work, case studies and practical application.

As a result of this meeting participants will be able to:

- Review key concepts related to community level prevention
- Utilize an existing community level prevention strategy to strengthen their own strategic plan
- Explore the components of evaluating a community level prevention strategy
- Describe how to identify next steps and activities to move their community level prevention strategies forward

SPEAKER BIOGRAPHY

Elise C. Lopez, DrPH, MPH

Dr. Lopez is the Assistant Director of the Relationship Violence Program at The University of Arizona's College of Public Health. Since 2004, Lopez has worked primarily on public health projects including design, implementation, and evaluation of substance abuse and relationship violence interventions. Lopez specializes in community and environmental-level interventions for sexual violence prevention, and has served as the Statewide Evaluation Coordinator for the Arizona Safer Bars Alliance since 2014.

In addition to public health qualifications, she holds degrees in Public Policy and Management and in Criminal Justice Administration. She was the recipient of the inaugural Youth, Family, and Community Evidence-Based Practice Award from the Center for Substance Abuse Treatment of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services in 2007.

In 2016, she received the Abstract of the Year Award from the American Public Health Association's Law Section for a law review article that situated restorative responses for sexual misconduct resolution within the boundaries of existing federal guidance and statutes. She is a member of the Arizona Institutions of Higher Education (AZIHE) network, and chairs the Restorative Responses working group of the national Campus PRISM Project (Promoting Restorative Initiatives for Sexual Misconduct).

She has given invited and refereed talks on sexual violence prevention and response in venues such as the National Sexual Assault Conference, American Public Health Association Annual Meeting, and Ontario Government Summit on Sexual Violence, and her work has been published in the CUNY Law Review, several books, trade journals, and public media.

GUEST FACILITATOR

Mary Dino, LCSW-R

Mary Dino is a clinical social worker licensed and practicing in the State of New York for twenty years. She is currently Clinical Assistant Professor at the NYU Child Study Center in New York City, where she is a master trainer and consultant in child and adolescent trauma, and in Trauma Systems Therapy.

Mary provides consultation and training for a variety of human services organizations, generally in the areas of child, youth and family work, in clinical and non-clinical settings, and has worked as a clinician and in program development in day treatment, residential, outpatient and foster care.

Mary's expertise is in training professionals working with youth and families in the areas of trauma, mental health, family engagement, collaborative practice and organizational stress, and in assessing and treating interpersonal trauma in children and adolescents. Mary is passionate about both training and learning, and strongly believes in the healing power of humor.
